

ANTH 89 (FYS)
SPRING 2025

ANTHROPOLOGY OF DISABILITY

Disability is a part of life: we all get sick, age, and require care. This course examines debates on disability from a perspective of cultural and medical anthropology. We focus on the diversity and richness of disability worlds, learning how different societies make sense of disability and how living with disability leads to a proliferation of identities and cultures. This course shows that studying disability unveils new ways to see the world and helps us to better understand what it means to be human.

Prof. Dafna Rachok

rachok@unc.edu

MWF 11:15-12:05